

Laundering money

DEF CON 32

Goal: do laundry without giving any money to

'Cause fuck em, that's why
—Ralph Henderson

Background: Speed Queens

All washers and dryers are Speed Queens:

- The most popular commercial washer/dryers in the U.S. (source: probably)
- Manuals can be found online
- CSC has modified them so nothing works

Non-solution: stupid arcade tricks

- Inserting quarter-sized metal washers (cost: $0.39 each)
- Drilling a hole in a quarter and tying a string around it

Non-solution: manual mode

- Pushing the two buttons
- Opening and closing the service panel door
- Separating a bullet connector

Non-solution: miscellaneous

- Disabling the payment system with a dipswitch (washers)
- Shorting the red-white and yellow-gray wires (dryers)

Background: CSC ServiceWorks

CSC loans laundry machines to apartments and condominiums. Residents pay to use them with

- A refillable chip card (legacy?)
- The CSCPay or CSC GO apps
- Quarters

In exchange, CSC is obligated to maintain the machines.

Dark patterns

Dark pattern: prepaid cards

- Fuck you if it stops working
- Card refill machine eats $1 bills but doesn't add $1 to the card
- Card readers all removed ahead of schedule
- Snail mail & blind faith required for a refund

Dark pattern: machine settings

- How many loads of laundry does it take to spend a multiple of $10 at $1.85 a piece?
Hint: it's 200
- Can't change cycle options after you've put a quarter in

Dark pattern: apps

- Takes money at any time but can only be used if the building's wifi is up
- Alleged by PayRange, Inc. to be stolen IP
- I don't know, I've never used them
- They're apps

Dark pattern: customer service

- To get a refund:
 - call customer service
 - wait on hold for an hour
 - they say use the website
 - the website says download the app
- When the machines break, CSC doesn't actually fix them (one job)
- Lost RICO suit over “administrative fees”

What are you gonna do, sue us for $2?
